The bidding for the exchange of the Consulate was unusually spirited, over $50,000 having been tendered at various rates from 65 to 88 per cent. premium on the money advanced. The exchange was awarded to the two lowest bidders at 65 to 68 per cent. premium. During the incumbency of the present efficient Consul, it is but justice to say that no delay or trouble has been experienced in the payment of his Consular drafts at Washington. As a consequence, the reputation of the drafts has become well established, and they are now sought for as the best remittance in the market.

Gold drafts on the Atlantic States command 6 to 8 per cent. discount. The exchange of the United States Legation was taken at 7 per cent. This mode of drawing bills is the rency is gold. Notwithstanding the fluctuation in the value of gold in New York, drawing in gold is undoubtedly the safest and least expensive to those on whom the drafts are drawn. THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26.

Foreign News. WITH no less than five arrivals from San Francisco during the past seven days, we have had a deluge of papers without any very important war news, either European or American.

The most interesting item from America, and that which gives promise of great importance in the conduct of the war, is the appointment of General Grant to be Lieutenant-General of the National Forces. The nature of this new office is probably as yet not fully defined. The Prest dent is the Constitutional Commander-in-Chief. A Lieutenant-General acts for, or in other words, performs the duties which by law belong to the Commander-in-Chief. Gen. Halleck now becomes an Aid of Gen. Grant, and of course ranks below him.

One great obstacle to the success of the national cause has been the want of unity of action in the various armies which encircle the rebel territory. M'Clellan was appointed in 1861 to remedy this defect, but when it was found that he was required in the field, Halleck was designated to act in his place. But these appointments clashed, and continual disputes and jealousies have been the result. If Grant has the firmness to take the responsibility and the genius to plan and conduct the war, his appointment will prove a fortunate step.

It is stated among the latest telegrams that Grant has said that it is of no use to try to operate in other sections till Richmond is taken. Others have thought so for a long time; but how is it to be done-there's the rub. If he succeeds in doing what a score of generals have tried and failed in, he will show that he merits the chaplet of honor with which the American people have just rewarded him. It is stated that Gen. Kilpatrick's cavalry, in the raid around Lee's army, went within three miles of Richmond. He had only about 4,000 troops, but had they been supported by sufficient infantry, it would appear that Richmond might have been stormed and perhaps captured, or at least the Union prisoners might have been released. This is proved by the fact that the prisoners are being removed to Georgia for safer keeping.

The return of Gen. Sherman to Vicksburg does not appear to have been a repulse, as he had no important engagement with the enemy, but it was caused by his plans for a junction with the cavalry forces of Grierson having been defeated. Had they succeeded in uniting, it is quite probable that Mobile would have been their destination. As it is, the expedition so effectually destroyed the railroads as to render it next to impossible for the rebels to procure supplies west of the State of Alabama, thus still further contracting their limits and crippling their resources.

In other quarters, the events that have transpired may be briefly narraced .- Unarieston continued to be bombarded, with what effect, the rebel papers do not state. The Union forces sent to Florida had been repulsed with loss, and driven back to Jacksonville, a seaport town. The rebels are making strong efforts to regain possession of their lost territory in North Carolina, and some hard fighting is evidently going on there now. The rebel Gen. Longstreet had been compelled to retreat from the vicinity of Knoxville, and is supposed to have rejoined Lee's army. Admiral Farragut was at work bombarding the forts at the entrance of Mobile harbor.

The war in Denmark continues, and there have been several engagements, in which the Danish forces have been compelled to fall back. It would appear from the news received that the English people are eager to enter the war as an ally of Denmark, but they desire France also to join them. But Napoleon has hardly forgotten the cool answers he received from the various powers on his European Congress scheme, at which he intended to settle all these difficulties without bloodshed, and now very wisely holds back, and looks coolly on as a spectator only. If any capital or glory is to be had, probably Napoleon will step forward, join in the dispute, and perhaps put

The news from the pirate craft Alabama places her at Singapore from the 23d to the 28th of December. On the latter day she left that port bound west, as some reports say, towards Calcutta. Another letter states that she bought all the warm clothing obtainable, with the purpose of cruising to the northward, and was at the latest date at Labuan, a small island on the coast of Borneo, used by the English as a coal depot. It would appear from these advices that she was at Singapore at the same date she was before reported at Amoy. As the latter report was carried to Japan simply by a verbal message spoken between two vessels in passing each other, it was probably incorrect, though she is doubtless bound for the China seas. She is represented as being sadly out of repair, and will seek some port where she can refit.

The death of Rev. T. STARR KING, which occurred in San Francisco March 4, will touch a chord in the heart of every American who has ever read his patriotic loyal speeches or heard his bold voice, raised so often in behalf of his country and the Union cause. During our short stay in San Francisco last summer, we had the good fortune to hear him twice-once in his own church, and again at a Union meeting in Union Hall, which is one of the largest public buildings in that city. On the occasion, which was a night or two before the last gubernatorial election, the hall was densely filled with ladies and gentlemen, for the simple announcement of his name drew a crowd anywhere. Mr. King came late, and Governor Lowe was entertaining the audience with a political speech, which seemed rather dull, and made the audience somewhat restless. While in the midst of his remarks, Mr. King quietly stepped on to the stage from a side door, and took his seat back of the speaker, without the latter observing him. The audience, as soon as he appeared, burst out in the most vociferous applause. The Governor was all taken aback, and hardly knew what to make of it, till turning around, he noticed that Mr. King had arrived, and politely come, and would give way to him. Quick as a wink, Mr. King was on his feet, and laying his hand on the Governor's shoulder, said, "I am glad we have here the coming man," referring to Mr. Lowe, who was a few days after elected Governor of the State. This happy allusion brought down a torrent of applause. Mr. King, on taking the stand, apologized for being late, and said the cause of it was he had just attended a union meeting of another kind, which was entirely unexpected, at which he had to unite a man and woman in marriage-the best kind of union meetings-and hoped, as the audience were all Union men, his apology would be accepted. His address was replete with incidents and anecdotes, interspersed with sound moral and political teachings, and for an hour or more he kept his audience chained with thrilling eloquence. He closed by saying that he had been asked to state at the meeting which of the two tickets citizens ought to vote. He said he should leave them to make their own choice; "but," said he, "after you have chosen your ballot, take down your Union muskets, roll up your ballot carefully, take aim, and fire low" (Lowe.) Such applause as this address brought out, we have never witnessed anywhere else. At its close, the band struck up the national battle-song, "John Brown's soul is a marching on," and the whole audience joined in the chorus, making the building fairly shake. It was worth, as we remarked to a companion, a voyage across the Pacific to hear such an address and such singing from a choir of four thousand

Starr King did great service in the Union cause in California, and to him more than any other man is that State indebted for the loyal sentiment prevailing there. When his death was announced at Washington, the Government sent orders to San Francisco that all the national flags be lowered, and at its order, on the day of his funeral, the two forts of posite the city fired minute guns in his honor-a token of respect that private citizens rarely ever receive. On the receipt of the news in Honolulu the American Minister very appropriately lowered the flag of the legation for three days in respect to Mr. King's memory. A full account of his death and funeral will be found in the Alta and Bulletin of the 12th of

Rumors have been current for some time past that certain persons are taking a most extraordinary interest in organizing the BOARD of EDUCA-TION with a view of making Bishop Staley the head of that important branch of the public service. If these rumors have any foundation, the United States Secretary of State must have been well informed when he made the remark that " the English Mission to Hawaii was nothing more than a political adventure!"

Can it be that the voluntary expatriation, forty years ago, of a band of men with their their wives from all the dearest associations of their native land; the trials and privations endured before they became firmly established among this (then) heathen people; the devotion of a life-time in seeking its welfare; the many lives laid down, and the gray-headed men still left in the country, whose only aim has been and still is to establish and encourage schools among the people that the Word of Truth may be intelligibly taught in the language Cod gave to Harrallans-have no claims upon the nation's gratitude?

Can it be that the claims for respect of the Roman Catholic missionaries have no foundation, many of whom have died while others have grown gray in teaching this people the doctrines of Christ according to their interpretation? Is the devotion of those priests and their venerable Bishop during the small-pox time, when they were truly ministers of Christ, and went about among the people cheerfully laboring day and night and sacrificing their all to save the Hawaiian race, entirely forgotten?

Can it be that the million and a half of treasure so freely contributed by the Puritans of America and the Catholics of France, with no thought or desire for any object beyond the moral advancement of the people, and which has all been expended (to say nothing of what is now being spent,) for the good of the Hawaiian people, in supplying them with teachers and books, which have taught them to read, write and eigher themselves into what they now are-one of the nations of the earth-can it be that this counts for nothing?

Can it be that all thise which history will show as their work, is now to be weighed in the scale against the good accomplished by the new English Mission of a year's growth, and declared wanting so much, that the leader of this new sect should be preferred to one and all of them as the man best entitled to be placed at the head of the Department of Government nearest and dearest to the hearts of the Hawaiian people and its teachers? For the future peace and prosperity of this nation, we say, God forbid.

Has this new candidate made it evident that the sympathies of the people are with him? Or does the empty school house in Nuuanu furnish evidence of the administrative ability necessary to establish and direct the schools of a Kingdom? We fear not, and even if it did, all thinking men would justly wonder at and condemn the policy that gave to this last churchman a political appointment, which, after Dr. Armstrong's time, was decided could only be justly filled by a civilian-a decision which has since been fully endorsed by all parties and creeds, as being, in this small Kingdom, the wisest and best policy. But we cannot and will not believe that any such backward movement can be brought about. We believe that the King understands the wants and sympathies of his people too well, and his advisers to be men too well read in political history not to foresee the great evils which would inevitably follow the appointment of a comparative stranger-whom most of the people have no faith in, and who is the head of a church with which they have no sympathy-to direct and control

No, we feel that such a political attempt cannot succeed with our present King, whom we respect as the highest and most independent Hawaiian in the Kingdom. On his decision of character and his well-known desire to advance the interests of Hawaii and the welfare of the Hawaiian race which he has shown in his past and present political life, we place our trust. He will always find us ready to uphold and stand fast to the doctrine of Hawaii for Hawaiians, and an earnest supporter of a just, liberal and independent policy towards all men, creeds and nationalities, showing partiality in public affoirs said to the audience that he was glad the mon had to none.

THE FRIEND.-This little quarto, now running through its twenty-first year, appeared on our table promptly on the first of the month. It fills a gap that no other publication here has ever done, and its indefatigable editor manages always to find something new and novel to issue in it. Among other articles we find a code of laws of the Friendly Islands, very much resembling our original code of Hawaiian laws, first published in 1840, so simple and concise that a lawyer's occupation was not worth much. As we advance in civilization, each subject is thought by our legislators to merit a separate chapter with a score of sections and frequent amendments, rendering the ser-vice of a legal adviser indispensable. Among the laws in the Friendly Island code referred to, is the following, which we should like to see established here, where cocoanct and other trees are ruthlessly cut down every year, to the detriment of of our agricultural interests

XXXI. The law concerning Cocoanut Trees. If any one wish to cut down a cocoanut tree he must first plant three cocoanuts, and then cut down the tree, but should he cut down the tree and neglect to plant the nuts, he shall be fined five dollars.
